

The Federal Communications Commission

Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

We are already assessed outrageous taxes on telephone service (cellular AND "land-line"). We are also involuntarily charged for others' phone service (at least the electric companies allow for VOLUNTARY charity).

People do not "need" cellular phone service. I got it only to be safe while frequently traveling in rural areas--and only then after being stranded on the road-side during a near-blizzard.

It's especially outrageous that we're forced to pay for others' use thereof when I see someone in a grocery-store, chatting away, surround by four or five children under the age of six...and paying for her purchases with funds obtained from us working folk.

I will not reiterate what this proposal entails: you very well know what's contained therein, and will gladly use this as the next step (the Universal Service was only the beginning).

I will write my representatives and anyone else I know of to remind or inform them of this proposal.

You, I expect, will get plenty of form-letters stating the proposal is "unfair" for a lot of reasons. It's unfair for only one: that it is yet another leech attached to the providers of this country--yet another form of wealth-redistribution. Remember: Our country went to war against Socialist governments in the last century.

Respectfully,

J.M.T. Eiland Lewiston, Idaho

Sincerely,

J.M.T. Eiland
